

Martha Brook

California Energy Commission (CEC)

Martha has been at the California Energy Commission (CEC) for over two decades. There she has become a highly respected expert in long-term energy demand forecasting, building energy efficiency standards, and research and development of energy efficient technologies for residential and commercial buildings.

Martha is currently the Technical Advisor to Commissioner Andrew McAllister where she provides support on all areas of building and appliance energy efficiency as well as energy data collection, organization, analysis, and publication.

Martha has a Bachelor of Science in Environmental Resources Engineering from California State University, Humboldt, and is a California Professional Mechanical Engineer.